PREFACE

The compiler of these records and notes has been collecting the data contained herein over a period of many years, and has visited several of the places mentioned. Searches have been made by and for him in this country and abroad.

Attention is called to the variation in the spelling of some names and in two or more instances of the same person, but this spelling follows the records as found.

Acknowledgment is made for the help of Mrs. Evelyn Marshall Suarez and Mr. Frederic Barnard in the cost of publishing this book, and to Mr. Alexander J. Wall for his help in editing it.

DESCENDANTS OF JAMES BANKS

William Banks' counting house in New York City was 102 Front Street which was destroyed in the Fire of 1835 and all his papers and letters were lost.

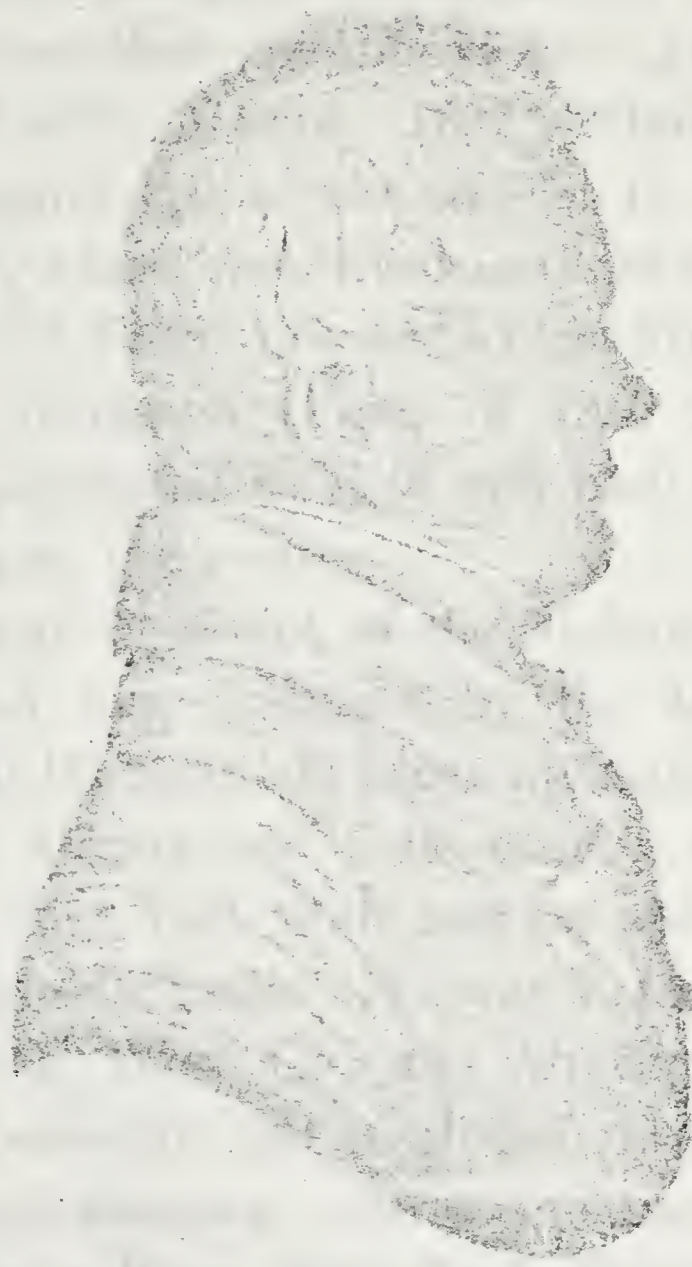

The fire burned over an area of some 50 acres of chiefly business property and destroyed all but three or four buildings within the area. About 674 buildings were consumed.

The only reference to his father's family found among his papers since that date was in a copy of a letter in answer to one from a Mr. Banks of Liverpool. This letter was not found, but was a business letter and asked as to possible relationship. William Banks in his answer simply stated that the relationship was possible as his family came from the "North of England," but to what generation he referred and where he did not say. James, his father, may have been a shipping merchant, as was William, who owned a part interest in one or two ships, as there is a book of James', entitled "The Ship Master's Assistant and Owner's Manual," published in London in 1788, which has "James Banks 1791" written in it. There was a gold masonic medal presented to James Banks in 1790 in recognition of his "steady and upright conduct in the office of Right Worshipful Master." In an attempt to trace the Lodge presenting this medal assistance was obtained from Col. E. M. L. Ehlers, the Grand Secretary of the Grand Lodge in New York, who wrote to Masonic Antiquarians, with the only result that there were other medals of the same pattern in England—one of them in the Grand Lodge Museum, London.

A book of Common Prayer belonging to James' daughter Maria, and with her name written in it, has the following written on the cover: "James Banks, born January 1st, 1749." None of James' daughters ever came to this country and with one exception all died in France, where they had lived some years.

William Banks was a shipping and commission merchant and was a resident of Kingston, Jamaica, in 1804, or earlier. His firm at one time was Banks, Hitchins & Smithe, his partners being Richard James Cade Hitchins and his brother-in-law Henry Smithe. They were "Merchants, Factors & Agents." On trips to New York, London and other ports he always took his sextant, artificial horizon and day and night telescope so he could take his own observations, and for companionship his box of chess. All these are still in the possession of his family. When he married in 1823 a branch of the firm was established in New York, to be conducted by him in his own individual name with authority to dissolve the Copartnership, as related to the New York concern, whenever he thought proper. He owned a storehouse and wharf at St. Georges, which was the principal port of Bermuda at that time, but the harbor later was ruined by coral growth. As an illustration of depreciation in land values, principally from this cause, the cost of this wharf property was $3,600; it was valued in 1833 at $2,500 and sold in 1910 for $600. It was held many years out of sentiment.

Mr. and Mrs. Banks moved to No. 5 Pearl Street early in 1826. This property ran through to No. 2 Bridge Street, on which was the stable. It had been bought by Robert Lenox the previous December and a life interest given to them and their children in fee. The house was destroyed by fire in January, 1862. About 1840 they had moved around the corner to No. 16 State Street, on the Battery, where they lived until 1846, when they moved to No. 72 Fifth Avenue, which Mr. Banks had built on the Northwest corner of 13th Street. This property was purchased in 1844 and had a frontage of 51 feet 7 inches on the avenue.

Mr. Banks was President of the Mohawk & Hudson R.R. The road was chartered by the Legislature of New York April 17, 1826. It began operation August 10, 1831, between Albany and Schenectady, and was the first railway in New York State and the second in operation in the United States. He was a director of the Farmers Loan & Trust Co., the Merchants National Bank, and the executor and trustee of several estates in this country and Jamaica. He was naturalized in the Court of Common Pleas, New York, October 15, 1836.

He died at his residence, No. 72 Fifth Avenue, on December 3, 1848, and was buried in his vault, No. 52, in the First Presbyterian Churchyard, Fifth Avenue and 12th Street, New York City.

DESCENDANTS OF JOSEPH MOZIER

Joseph Mozier, sculptor, said his family was of Huguenot ancestry. His father, Joseph, was a resident of Sheffield, Mass., in 1783, and afterwards of Poultney, Burlington and Underhill, Vt., finally settling in Underhill, in which town he owned property, as also in Stowe, Vt. The Burlington post office notices of letters received were addressed "Monsieur Joseph Mozier," etc. He married the daughter of Archibald Dixon, one of the first three Selectmen of the town of Underhill. On March 3, 1807, Joseph Mozier was elected "Highway Surveyor" for the town of Underhill and in the following September was admitted to the Freeman's oath. He moved to Fredericktown, Knox Co., Ohio, probably early in 1815 and lived a few miles west of that place. He died on March 3, 1820, and was buried in the churchyard of the Wayne Baptist Church, Fredericktown.

FIRST GENERATION

1 JOSEPH MOZIER, born 1764.

He married Elizabeth Dixon, daughter of Archibald Dixon. She was born October 15, 1762, and died May 11, 1842.

Children:

2 MILLER, married Jane Williams.

3 CARSON.

- 4 LUTHER DIXON, married Abbie L. Harrison.
- 5 JOSEPH, born August 22, 1813; died October 3, 1870.
- 6 HARRIET, married Jonathan Woodworth.
- 7 LAURA, married (1st) Able Pond; (2d) James Gardner;
(3d) James Packer.
- 8 BETSEY, married George Woodcock.

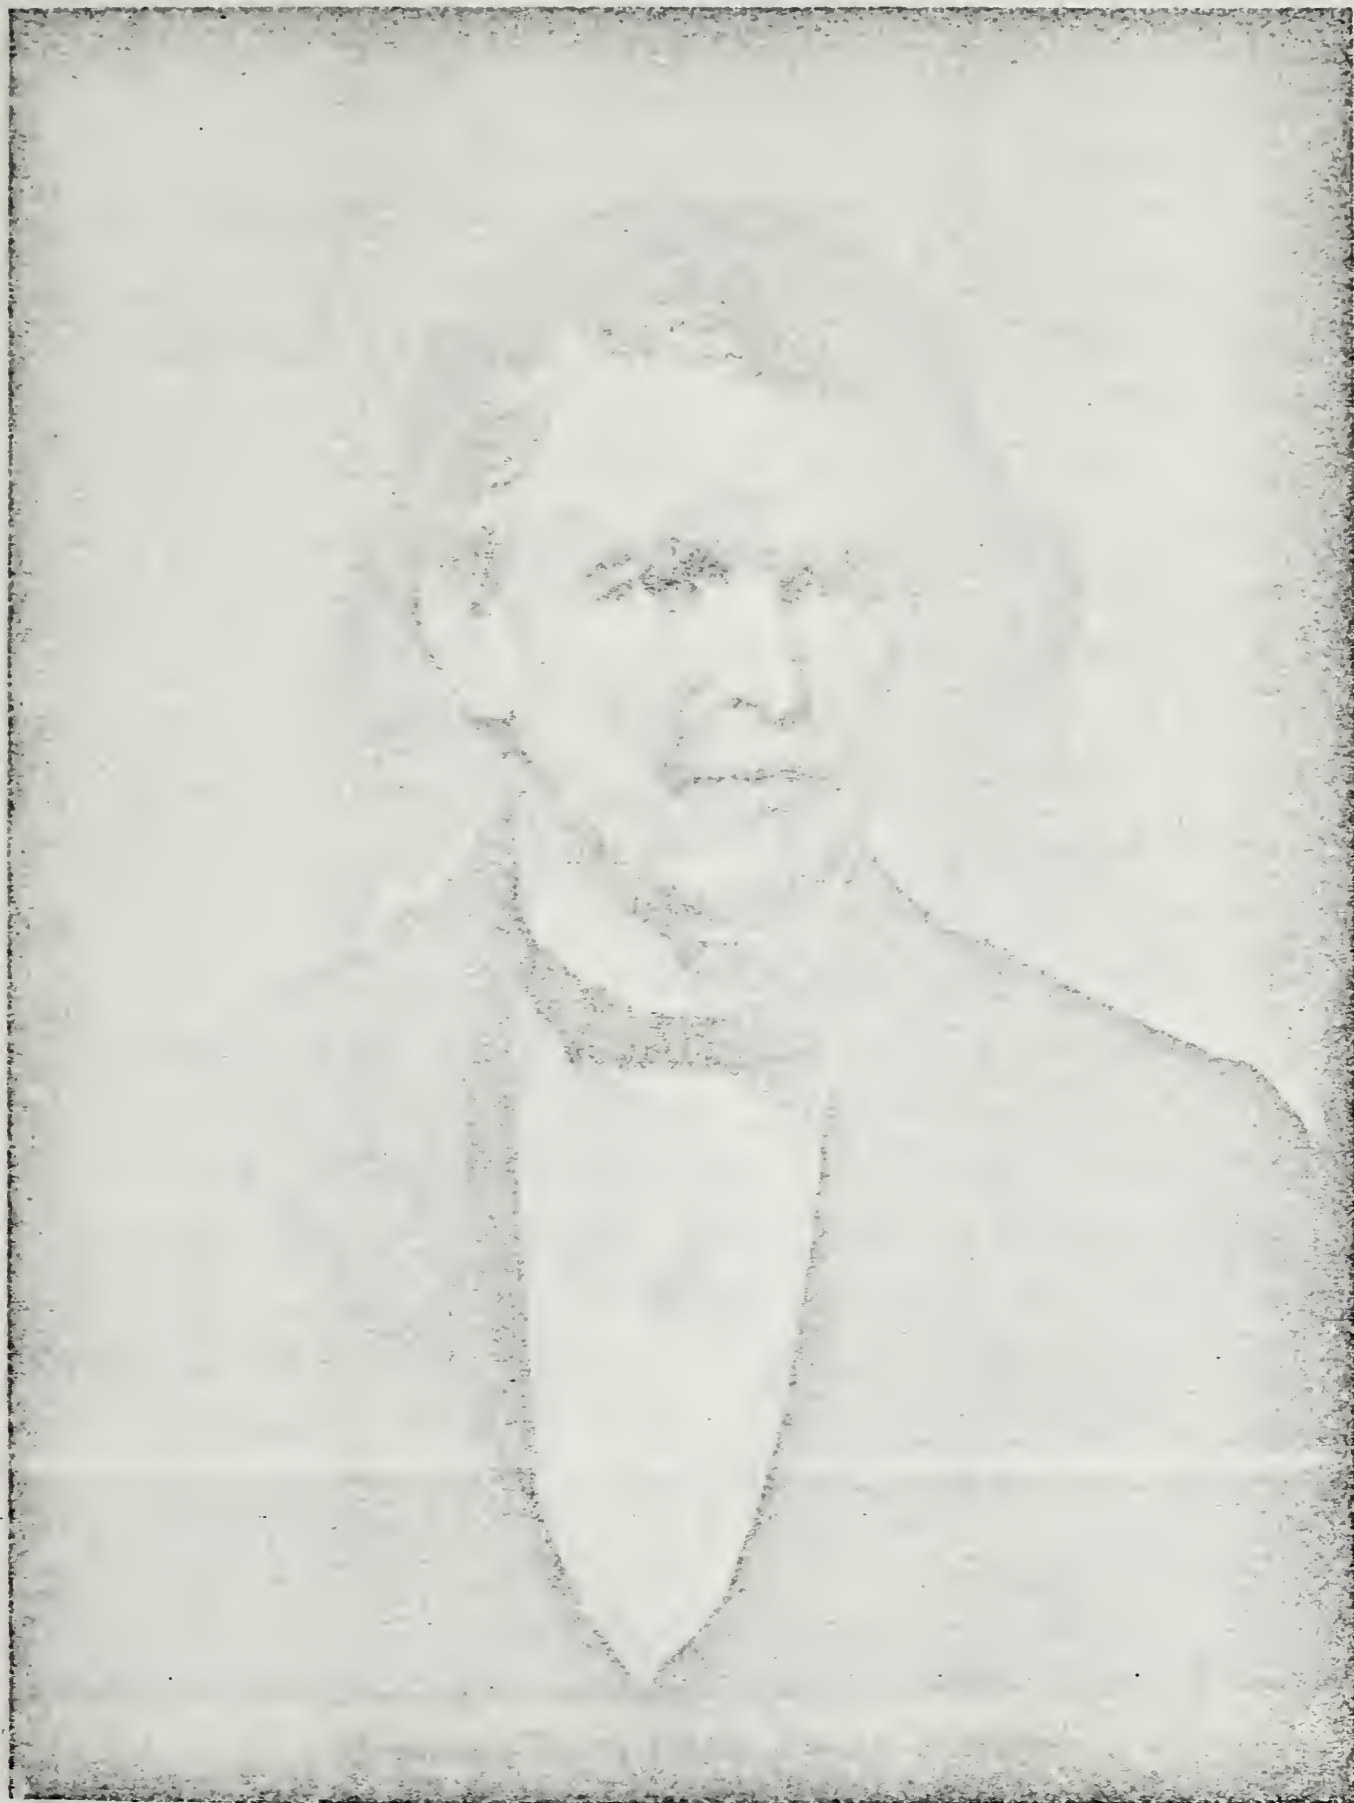

Carson was buried in Canada; Joseph in Italy; all the others in Ohio.

SECOND GENERATION

- 5 JOSEPH MOZIER, was born in Burlington, Vt., on August 22, 1813.

He married Isabella Hogg, daughter of Percival Hogg, on January 25, 1835, at Mount Vernon, Ohio. She was born in Chester-le-Street, Durham Co., England, on October 3, 1818. Mr. Mozier was in the dry goods business in New York City from at least 1833, as in 1834 he formed a partnership with Mr. O. B. Tweedy under the firm name of Tweedy, Mozier & Co. On the withdrawal of Mr. Tweedy in 1844 the firm became Mozier, Jennings & Co., and on Mr. Mozier's withdrawal the following year the firm was dissolved. Mr. Mozier went to Italy that year to study art and lived there until his death. Among his statues are "Il Penseroso," in Washington; "Prodigal Son," Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts; "Rebecca," New York Public Library; "Truth" and "Silence," New York Mercantile Library; "Silence," Mount Vernon, Ohio, Public Library, and "Undine," which won the Grand Prize in Rome in 1867. Mr. William J. Clark, Jr., in his "Great American Sculptures" gives an engraving of the "Prodigal Son." Mr. Henry B. Curtis, attorney of Mt. Vernon, Ohio, and brother-in-law of Mrs. Mozier, says in letters to her under date of April 6, 1862, "I have just seen in the Cincinnati Commercial from its foreign correspondent that Mr. Mozier has a conspicuous place among the contributors to the World's fair in London" . . . "the notice is very complimentary to him." Under date of October 29, 1867, "what you mention of the interview between Mr. Mozier and Garibaldi I have seen paragraphed in our newspapers," and on July 2, 1868, refers to the work Mrs. Mozier and other ladies had been performing during the past winter in the hospitals in Rome, "the poor Garabaldians suffered severely. How fervently they must bless you and the other ladies who ministered to their distress." Mr. Mozier died in Faido, Switzerland, on October 3, 1870, on his return to Rome from a visit to this country. He was buried in the Protestant Cemetery, Rome, Italy.

His widow married Eder V. Haughwout, widower, of Madison, N. J., at Mt. Vernon, Ohio, on July 21, 1873. She died October 1, 1889, at Mt. Vernon, while on a visit there and was buried in Woodlawn Cemetery, New York. Mr. Haughwout died at Madison, N. J., on October 14, 1887, and was buried in Woodlawn.

Mr. Henry G. Graham in his "Social Life in Scotland in the 18th Century" says it was "especially perplexing for gentlemen to get their sons started in life, when there were extremely few openings for the sons of gentlemen, little trade, a meagre commerce and few industries" and "sons of gentlemen of position held humble places in life." "The nobles and lairds were constantly at their wits' end to get means to pay their way and were obliged to live sparingly." Lord Kirkcudbright (Maclellan family) in the early part of the 18th century kept an ale house in Kirkcudbright, and a later head of the house was a glover, and such cases "were far from uncommon." For this reason many sons of gentlemen emigrated to America and other lands.

William, David and Robert came to this country prior to the War of the Revolution to join their uncle, David Sproat, in Philadelphia. Robert, the youngest, said he arrived in New York for the first time in October, 1774; he attended school for a time at Burlington, N. J. In June, 1777, David Sproat and his nephews, William and Robert, left Philadelphia and joined the British Army in New York, for which action his three story brick dwelling on the southwest corner of Walnut and Front Streets in 1779 was confiscated and sold. David Lenox sided with the American cause and was already in the army.

- 8 WILLIAM was born January 7, 1752. After the capture of Charleston, S. C., by Sir Henry Clinton in May, 1780, that port was also used for the confinement of naval prisoners. On May 21st Rear-Adiniral Arbuthnot appointed William Lenox Commissary of Naval Prisoners for the Southern District, and he was stationed at Charleston. He served until his death the following year.

Deaths. Last Wednesday evening, after a short illness, in the 29 year of his age, William Lennox, Esqr., Commissary of Naval Prisoners for the Southern District; universally esteemed, beloved and lamented; a cheerful companion, a sincere, steady friend and an honest man.

He was buried in the churchyard of the Presbyterian Church, Charleston.

- 9 DAVID (1753-1828) Captain 3d Pennsylvania Battalion, Col. John Shee, 1776; captured at Fort George November 16, 1776, and a prisoner eighteen months; exchanged and released May 15, 1778, when he joined the Army at Valley Forge and was appointed aide-de-camp on staff of Major-General Anthony Wayne. The Committee of Congress had previously fixed his rank as Major from 7th of June, 1777. He was appointed by General Washington one of a commission to visit England in connection with the recognition of the rights of Americans on the high seas. Mr. Lenox was president of the Pennsylvania Society of Cincinnati; president of the Philadelphia Bank, now the Philadelphia National Bank, and one of the first five trustees named by Stephen Girard for his bank.

In October, 1818, he announced his intention to retire from active business and resigned as president and director of the Philadelphia Bank. In accepting his resignation the Board wished him "that happiness which a long life spent in a manner equally honorable to yourself and beneficial to your country, justly entitles you."¹

He was married on August 26, 1779, at Christ Church, Philadelphia, to Tace, daughter of John Lukens, Surveyor-General of Pennsylvania. They had a summer residence, "The Pavilion," at Bristol, and "many distinguished persons were entertained there."² This property was inherited by their niece, Miss Sarah Lukens Keene, who lived with them, and who devised it to the Sarah Lukens Keene Home for Gentlewomen, an institution dedicated to the memory of Mrs. Lenox. David Lenox and his wife are mentioned in the historical novel "Hugh Wynne," by Dr. Weir Mitchell.

There were two David Lenoxes in Philadelphia during the Revolution. So far as known there was no relationship.

The Pennsylvania Packet of April 17, 1781, contains a letter from David Lenox denying the truth of a story circulated by Francis Lewis, Sr., of Philadelphia, a member of the Board of Admiralty, that a quantity of goods had been seized crossing the Delaware and that they were sent by David Sproat of New York to Major Lenox. Lenox called on Lewis and demanded his authority for this statement. Lewis said he could not recollect the place where or person who mentioned it. Lenox then told Lewis that because of his age he could do nothing but publish a denial of the story "which I most certainly should not have done could I have fixed the report on a younger man." He stated in the letter "that any man who would even hint a thing of this kind was a liar and a rascal." Lewis's answer in the Packet of April 24, 1781, says he overheard the remark but does not know who made it.

- 12 ROBERT (1759-1839) was born in Kirkcudbright, Scotland, December 31, 1759, and baptized January 2, 1760. He came to this country prior to the War of the Revolution to join his uncle, David Sproat, a merchant in Philadelphia. For a time he attended school in Burlington, N. J. Upon the breaking out of the War he went with Mr. Sproat to New York City and was employed as clerk in his uncle's office, acting at times as "director of Flags of Truce." During the war he divided his time between New York, Charleston, and trips to the West Indies and elsewhere, in connection with his own and his uncle's interests. It was during one of these trips in 1781 he was taken prisoner by the French man-of-war Northumberland, but released at the request of his brother, Major Lenox. He was married by the Revd. Mr. Abraham Beach at Christ Church Parish, New Brunswick, N. J., on September 1, 1783, to Rachel, daughter of Nicholas Carmer of New York.

On December 3, 1783, he sailed for England with his uncle to assist him with his accounts as Commissary. Mrs. Lenox remained in this country. On his return here the following September he became a shipping and commission merchant. Prior to 1806 he lived at 175 Pearl Street. In 1805-6 he moved to 59 Broadway, where he resided until his death in 1839.

Mr. Lenox was an Alderman of this city, 1795-7 and 1800-2; president of the St. Andrews Society, 1798-1814; one of the founders of the Lying-in Hospital and its president for several years; vice-president of the Chamber of Commerce, 1819-26, and its president, 1826, until his death; trustee and chairman of the Board Sailors Snug Harbor; trustee of Princeton College; an elder for thirty years in the First Presbyterian Church and a director in many institutions. He was president of the Mutual Insurance Co., the first fire insurance company in New York City.

President John Maclean, in his history of Princeton College, says Mr. Lenox was chairman of the Committee on Finance, "to whose care and foresight the College was indebted for the security and increase of its funds. For many years all investments of College money were made under his direction."

Mr. Lenox, Mr. Sproat and others formed an association which procured a grant of land at Port Rosewery, afterwards called Shelburne, in Nova Scotia. This was with the intent of settling there after the War; but Mr. Lenox remained in New York and Mr. Sproat did not return to this country.

³On August 22, 1794, at the time of the yellow fever epidemic in New York, Governor George Clinton appointed Robert Lenox and Nicholas Carmer two of a Committee of Health with full powers. This Committee superseded the Citizens

³ Minutes of the Committee of Health.

Committee of 1793, on which were both Mr. Lenox and Mr. Carmer. The first meeting of the Governor's Committee was held at the Tontine Coffee House on August 26, 1791, John Broome, chairman, and Robert Lenox, secretary.

Governors Island was first used for the reception of the sick, and in September, 1794, Belle Vue was purchased by the Committee for the City and used for this purpose. Dr. Samuel Bard suggested the purchase of the property known as Belle Vue, (now Bellevue Hospital) and Mr. Lenox was directed to buy it. Nearly 750 persons died here during the Summer and Fall of 1795. During the Summer of 1793 about four thousand persons died of the fever in Philadelphia in about three months.

In March, 1786, Mr. Lenox was naturalized while on a visit to Baltimore. In politics he was a Federalist.

He died at his residence, No. 59 Broadway, on December 13, 1839, and was buried in his vault in the First Presbyterian Churchyard, Wall Street, and on April 13, 1844, was removed to new vault, No. 124, in Marble Cemetery, Second Street.

Extract from the resolution passed on his death by the Chamber of Commerce: "An eminent merchant who for a period beyond the ordinary course of human life had been distinguished for great prudence, a clear and sound judgment and unblemished reputation."

17 JAMES LENNOX (1772-1839) of "Dalskairth."

In September, 1787, David Sproat wrote Robert Lenox from London that James would finish school in the following spring and he intended to send him over then to Robert's care.

He established the commercial house of Jas. Lenox and Wm. Maitland in 1796. In 1818 he retired from the firm and returned to Scotland to live, and died there. The firm then became Kennedy & Maitland; Maitland, Phelps & Co. in 1847, and later Maitland, Coppell & Co. He died May 10, 1839, unmarried, and was buried in Kirkcudbright.

In a paper executed on January 14, 1810, in the matter of the settlement of his estate and signed by all the children and four sons-in-law of Robert Lenox, it is stated James died "intestate and without issue, leaving his brother, Robert Lenox, then of the City of New York, and his sisters, Mrs. Janet Crie and Mrs. Mary Kennedy, both then and yet resident in Scotland, and no other brother or sister nor any descendent of any deceased brother or sister him surviving, he, the said James Lennox being at the time of such his death, seized and possessed of real and personal estates as well in Great Britain as in America." "Dalskairth," his residence was in the parish of Troqueer, stewarty of Kirkcudbright and near Dumfries. It included "Dalskairth," Light Waterford Parks and parts of Drungans and was valued at his death at £16,000; he also left the properties Lincluden, formerly Cluden, parish of Kirkpatrick-Irongray, valued at £27,500, and Chapeltown, parish of Borgue, valued at £8,500.

Sir

This forenoon a vessel appeared in our bay, which has proved to be an American privateer: She landed a number of men at St. Mary's Isle in this harbour, and plundered the house of the Earl of Selkirk of all the Silver plate, &c. The men retired immediately to their vessel. But as she still hovers on the coast, tho' both wind & tide tend to facilitate her getting [sic] out. We have good reason to fear her Commander means to prosecute his scheme of plunder, and all the coast is greatly alarmed. We expect a visit on the turn of the tide, and have no arms, or other mode of defence.

⁴ Admiralty Letters of Intelligence 1762-1781. Folio 617. Mr. Stephens was secretary of Admiralty, London.

The vessel may be about 200 or 250 Tons burden; is Ship-rigged, And may we think have about 18 or 20 Guns: Report says the last; but as She keeps all her ports shut we cannot say the number certainly.

We have alarm'd the coast; and sent an express to Lochryon where we are told there are [sic] one of His Majesty's frigates, requesting her commander to come to the relief of the inhabitants. But we doubt if any Frigate be now on the coast; And as there are none of the military nearer than Edin.^r or Glasgow, the whole of this shore will be laid under contribution.

I have thought it my duty to apprize of this circumstance, and of the Defenceless State of the coast & country, hoping it may be deemed expedient to Scour & Secure the channell that trade may be protected; or if that cannot be done that at least our dwelling houses may be guarded from plunder & insult.

I am with respect

Sir

Your most obedient humble

Servant

DESCENDANTS OF ABRAHAM CARMER^{1,2}

Abraham Carmer, or Kermer, came from Hamburg, Germany, and was married on December 1, 1656, at the Dutch Church of New Amsterdam. In 1665 he lived on the Cingel, north side of Wall Street. On March 9, 1665, he purchased a house and lot "south of the wall of this city" . . . "all free and unencumbered without any charge being thereon or arising therefrom save the Lord's right." In 1686 his widow lived on New Street, and in 1693 his children deeded property in the same street—probably the same land as first mentioned and sold after the death of Metje Davids. Abraham Carmer died between December 13, 1685, and 1686. His widow died between 1686 and 1693.

FIRST GENERATION

1 ABRAHAM CARMER.

DESCENDANTS OF ARCHIBALD DIXON

Mr. M. D. Raymond of Tarrytown, N. Y., wrote a history of the Dixon family, which was published in the Sherburne (N. Y.) News, September 26, 1891.

- 1 ARCHIBALD DIXON is said to have been born in Jedburgh, Scotland.

He was born in 1727 and married Eleanor Miller on October 6, 1751. In 1754, or earlier, he was living in Lebanon, Conn., as three of his sons were born there. On January 20, 1761, Alexander Dixon of Lebanon sold him 150 acres of land at Kent, Conn. They were probably related, as Archibald named one of his sons Alexander. Three or more of his children were baptized in Kent. In 1771 he sold part of his land in Kent, and in 1774 he is described as of Woodbury. It was that part of Woodbury called Bethlehem. His name appears in the list in the town of Bethlehem of those who "engage to equip ourselves for the defence of our rights," etc., date of July 18, 1776. Three of his sons, Thomas, Joseph and David, served with the American Army in the Revolution. In 1781 Archibald sold the remainder of his land in Kent and is spoken of in the deed as being still in Woodbury. He moved to Underhill, Vt., about 1790, or earlier, and was one of the first three Selectmen of that town March 9, 1795. He died there May 26, 1800, and his widow died October 26, 1815. Both were buried in Underhill. She was one of the original members of the first church in Underhill formed December 29, 1801. The following record of the births of their children is an exact transcript from the original in Archibald's handwriting. [This was in the possession of his grandson, Dr. L. J. Dixon, of Milton, Vt., who showed it to me. J. L. B.]

Children:

- 2 THOMAS, born Monday ye 24th July 1752.
- 3 JOSEPH, born Monday ye 30th September 1754.
- 4 DAVID, born Friday ye 10th Dec'r 1756.
- 5 MARY, born Saturday ye 10th June 1759.
- 6 JARED, born Wednesday ye 14th May 1760.
- 7 BETSEY, born Friday ye 15th October 1762.
- 8 ALEXANDER, born Sunday ye 3^d March 1765.
- 9 ARCHIBALD, born Thursday ye 14th May 1767.
- 10 LUTHER, born Wednesday ye 20th Dec'r 1769.
- 11 MARY, born Thursday ye 2^d July, 1772.

Among his children were:

- 3 JOSEPH, born September 30, 1754; died May 18, 1839.
Married Mercy Raymond, daughter of David Raymond of Kent. Joseph Dixon was one of the early settlers of Sherburne, N. Y.
- 10 LUTHER, born December 20, 1769, the father of Dr. Dixon, was Representative from Underhill in 1811, '12 and '19. In 1813 he was Lieutenant-Colonel in command of a portion of the 3d Brigade of the 3d Division Vermont Militia that crossed the Lake to Plattsburgh to aid the U. S. troops. He was buried in Milton.
- 11 MARY, born July 2, 1772, married Daniel Clark, who was Representative from Essex in 1812.

BETSEY, born in Kent, October 15, 1762;
baptized October 17, 1762.

In her father's paper she is called "Betsey," and the church record is "Jane"—intended probably for "Betsey Jane." On her tombstone her name is "Elizabeth." The age given there is an error, as it would have been the exact age of a younger brother. She married Joseph Mozier, who died March 3, 1820. She died May 11, 1842. Both were buried in Fredericktown, Ohio.

- 5 WILLIAM HOGG lived in Brownsville, Penn., "a successful merchant and distinguished citizen of Western Pennsylvania." About 1826 the tract of land containing about eight thousand acres which he owned was purchased for the location of Kenyon College, Gambier, Ohio. In Mr. George F. Smythe's history of Kenyon College, Mr. Henry B. Curtis of Mt. Vernon, Ohio, gives an account of the selection of the college site. William Hogg had 8,000 acres in Ohio for which he asked $24,000, but which he sold to Bishop Philander Chase on March 6, 1826, as a site for the seminary and college for $18,000. It was Bishop Chase's intention to keep one-half of the property and sell the other half, which he did, for about $22,500. The $18,000 was all subscribed in England. Bishop Chase was rector of Christ Church, Poughkeepsie, N. Y., 1799-1805.

SECOND GENERATION

- 6 PERCIVAL HOGG, born December 1, 1763, in Newhall, Allerton Parish, England.

He married in 1788 in Bedlington, Northumberland County, England, Elizabeth Hair, born May 29, 1771, daughter of Thomas and Eleanor Hair of Bedlington. Elizabeth Hogg died January 17, 1842, in Mt. Vernon, Ohio, and was buried there. He died in Mount Pleasant, Jefferson County, Ohio, on January 23, 1821, and was buried in Mount Pleasant, where the family was living at that time.

ROBERT LENOX IN POLITICS¹

During the years 1795-1802 Robert Lenox, who had been elected an alderman of this city, was the subject of untruthful and abusive anonymous accusations intended in part as an attack upon the Federalist party, of which he was a member. These charges were referred to in an editorial in the Evening Post as "the most abusive personal attacks on every man opposed to what the editor (American Citizen) calls his party, and to attempt by fabricating facts, either libellous or ridiculous, to injure and mortify their feelings . . . we ask of the well disposed of all parties if there is no way to stop this rancorous effusion of personal malevolence?" The references to Mr. Lenox were in relation to his alleged connection in the management of the prison ships during the War of the Revolution, with which he had nothing to do. The letters, as stated, were always anonymous, and the names of the alleged authorities referred to in editorials were never mentioned.

The purpose of these communications was simply political abuse and as such it failed in effect. That Mr. Lenox's fellow citizens paid no heed to such contributions is shown by his re-election in 1796.

In 1797 he declined a second re-nomination.

In 1800 he again represented the Second Ward, serving two years, and was again an object of attack by his political opponents, as were others of his party. For the information of those who might not know him personally, he at first published simply a denial of these charges, but later, in 1802, gave to the newspapers for publication several statements in corroboration of his denial, some of which had been voluntarily sent him by American officers. These statements had been collected in 1796 for the purpose of publication at that time but were withheld.

In Mr. Lenox's declaration he asserts he was never in New York but a few weeks prior to the summer of 1779. That he never held any commission under the British Government, or any office or employment on board the prison ships or any agency in victualling prisoners or of any kind whatever, other than as clerk in his uncle's, the Commissary's office, and occasionally going with flags of truce to Elizabethtown for the exchange of prisoners. That a great part of his time had been taken up about his own concerns, having been nearly one-half the period from the year 1779-1783 in the West Indies, at Charleston and elsewhere.

It was on one of these trips during the Fall of 1781 he was captured and a prisoner on board the French man-of-war Northumberland, from which he was released at the request of his brother, Major David Lenox, of the Continental Army.

The following extracts are taken from the statements referred to above:

From Cap^t Jonathan Dayton, the American officer stationed at Elizabethtown: "I never heard directly or indirectly from any of those numerous and unfortunate individuals the least reflection or complaint against Mr. Lenox in consequence of his treatment of them, but on the contrary recollect in repeated instances their expressions of gratitude and acknowledgment for the humane and accommodating disposition which he manifested toward them."

From Lieut.-Col. William Stephens Smith, Aide-de-camp on Gen^l Washington's staff: "I frequently heard Mr. Robert Lenox (then acting as clerk in the office of the Commissary General of Naval prisoners in the British lines) mentioned by prisoners and others with gratitude and regard for his humane and benevolent conduct toward them."

From Mr. Skinner, the American Commissary General of prisoners: "I never heard any complaint against Mr. Lenox's conduct, indeed I am well convinced that if there had been any I should have heard them."

From Alexander Hamilton, that he had understood from American officers that Mr. Lenox "had repeatedly manifested a kind and accommodating disposition towards our prisoners, an impression which upon our regaining possession of New York and my becoming acquainted with Mr. Lenox, induced me to show him marks of cordiality and esteem."

THE EVENING POST

New York, Wednesday, October 28, 1896

GOSSIP NOT HISTORY

To the Editor of the Evening Post:

Sir: The injustice of accepting and perpetuating idle gossip is instanced in the following quotation from Mr. Charles H. Haswell's "Reminiscences of an Octogenarian of the City of New York," published lately:

"In the War of the Revolution, his (Robert Lenox) father was the keeper of the dreaded prison-ship at the Wallabout, Brooklyn, and Robert was an individual assistant to his father, enjoying the highly remunerative position of supplying the prisoners with such articles as were not included in their meagre and ill-served rations."

Mr. Haswell claims as his authority for this statement "common report" and "tradition," and he is now disposed to think that he has done an injustice which he will cheerfully withdraw if his book reaches a second edition. I do not think that such a contingency would correct the wrong. That Mr. Lenox in 1776 was a boy of seventeen and that his father never came to this country seems to have been of little moment to Mr. Haswell in the making of a good story.

If he had visited any of the libraries of this city, he would have found that the report to which he probably had reference was that Mr. David Sproat, an uncle of Mr. Lenox, held a civilian appointment as British Commissary, and Mr. Lenox was a clerk in his uncle's office; but that either received money from prisoners is not shown by a particle of evidence, and this Mr. Haswell admits.

It is a simple matter to judge the value of a book of historical pretensions dependent upon such authority as "common report" and "tradition."

JAMES LENOX BANKS.

New York, October 27.

JAMES LENOX OF NEW YORK

James Lenox was the son of Robert Lenox and Rachel Carmer and was born August 19, 1800.

He graduated from Columbia in 1818 and received his Master's degree from Columbia and Princeton in 1821; studied law and was admitted to the bar. He received the degree of LL.D. from Princeton in 1867 and from Columbia in 1875. In 1826 he was taken into partnership by his father, under the firm name of Robert Lenox and Son, and continued in business until shortly after his father's death, when he retired to give his attention to his estate, to collecting books and other interests.

He gave to the City in 1870 the Lenox Library, situated on Fifth Avenue between 70th and 71st Streets. On May 23, 1895, it was consolidated with the Astor Library and Tilden Trust, and the new corporation was known as the New York Public Library, Astor, Lenox and Tilden Foundations. The new library building was erected on Fifth Avenue, between 40th and 42nd Streets, and was formally opened on May 23, 1911. He was one of the founders of the Presbyterian Hospital and gave it the block of land 70th to 71st Streets, Madison to Park Avenues. The hospital was founded in 1868. It is now a part of the Columbia Presbyterian Medical Center, situated at Broadway and 168th Street. These properties given by Mr. Lenox were part of his father's farm, known as "My Farm at the Five Mile Stone," which description was given it by Robert Lenox. It consisted of about thirty acres and ran from the north side of 68th Street to the south side of 74th Street and from Fifth to Park Avenues, all included. When Robert Lenox made his will in 1829 he directed this property be held by his son, as he had a firm persuasion that it might, at a not distant date, be the site of a village, "At all events I want the experiment made by keeping the property from being sold." In a codicil he withdrew the reservation, "but," he added, "at the same time I wish him to understand that my opinion respecting the property is not changed, and though I withdraw all legal restrictions to his making sale of the whole or part of the same, yet I enforce upon him my advice not do to so." No part of the farm was sold until about 1864.

Mr. Lenox died February 17, 1880, at his residence, No. 53 Fifth Avenue, and was buried in the Family Vault, Marble Cemetery, Second Street. "Such was James Lenox of New York, who died on the 17th of February, 1880, at the age of eighty, the bibliographer, the collector, the founder of one of the most valuable public libraries in the New World; the philanthropist, the builder of churches, the establisher of a large public hospital, the giver to New York of a Home for Aged Women, the dispenser of untold silent charity and the benefactor of his native city and his honoured country."¹

DAVID SPROAT OF PORT MARY¹

David Sproat was the son of David Sproat of Kirkcudbright, Scotland, and brother of Mrs. James Lenox of that place. He was born in 1734. In 1760 he came to Philadelphia and was a merchant there until the War of the Revolution when, in 1777, he joined the British Army in New York. For this act his house which was a three-story brick dwelling on the southwest corner of Walnut and Front Streets, together with its contents, was confiscated and sold in 1779. On October 13, 1779, he was appointed British Commissary General of Naval Prisoners in North America and acted as such until the end of the war. The prison ships at New York being under the immediate charge of officers of the Navy. In 1780, on account of some disagreement, he sent in his resignation to Rear-Admiral Arbuthnot, then cruising off Rhode Island. This was the situation found by Lord Rodney upon his arrival with his fleet at New York, and at whose request Mr. Sproat withdrew his resignation. "It was not without some intercession," writes Lord Rodney to the Commissioners in London, "which I made for the sake of the public, as this man is the only person I can find capable of managing the business properly that I prevailed on him to continue to act by order from me."

¹ David Sproat and Naval Prisoners in the War of the Revolution. By James Lenox Banks. The Knickerbocker Press, 1909.

At one time he was appointed Commissary of Prisoners for the Army by Lord Dorchester, under whose command he received and exchanged the soldiers taken at Saratoga and Yorktown. At the end of the War, on the recommendation of Mr. Robert Morris, Minister of Finance, Congress directed he be repaid upwards of £550 currency, which he had personally paid out for the relief of American naval prisoners. He was vice-president of the St. Andrews Society of Philadelphia, 1772-73. He sailed for England on the evacuation of the city in 1783 to settle his accounts in London and did not return to this country.

The following year he was elected a member of the Town Council of Kirkcudbright, and Provost in 1792 and 1793. He died in October, 1799, and was buried in Kirkcudbright.

Port Mary was in the parish of Rerrick, alias Riddick, barony of Dundrennan and stewartry of Kirkcudbright. It was on Solway Firth and was said to be the place from which Queen Mary of Scotland embarked for England, on May 16, 1568, having spent the previous night at Dundrennan Abbey nearby.

James Lenox of New York had a painting of this scene made by Thomas Clark of the Royal Scottish Academy, and Henry Inman of New York painted a picture of Dundrennan Abbey. Mr. Sproat entailed the property in favor of his nephews, and upon his death it passed to David Lenox of Philadelphia, then to Robert Lenox of New York, and at his death to his son James, his brother James having died before him.

MILNHOUSE KIRKCUDBRIGHT, SCOTLAND

In 1648 or earlier, William Whitehead, son and heir of William Whitehead, was in possession of this property (Instrument of Sasine in the Cornmiln of Grange &c &c of the whole Barony of St. Mary's Isle by James Lidderdale of Isle to William Whitehead of Milnhouse, dated 22 aug. 1648 and reg^d at Dumfries the 29th of said month).

On the 2^d June 1671, William Whitehead gave the property to his wife, Lillas Austin, for life and his daughters Janet, Grissell and Margaret in fee. Janet having married Robert, son of Patrick Angus, skipper in Burntisland, all her family on December 18, 1671, agree to give Milnhouse to Robert Angus and his wife, and deed the property on June 1, 1672—registered at Edinburgh 11th of said month.

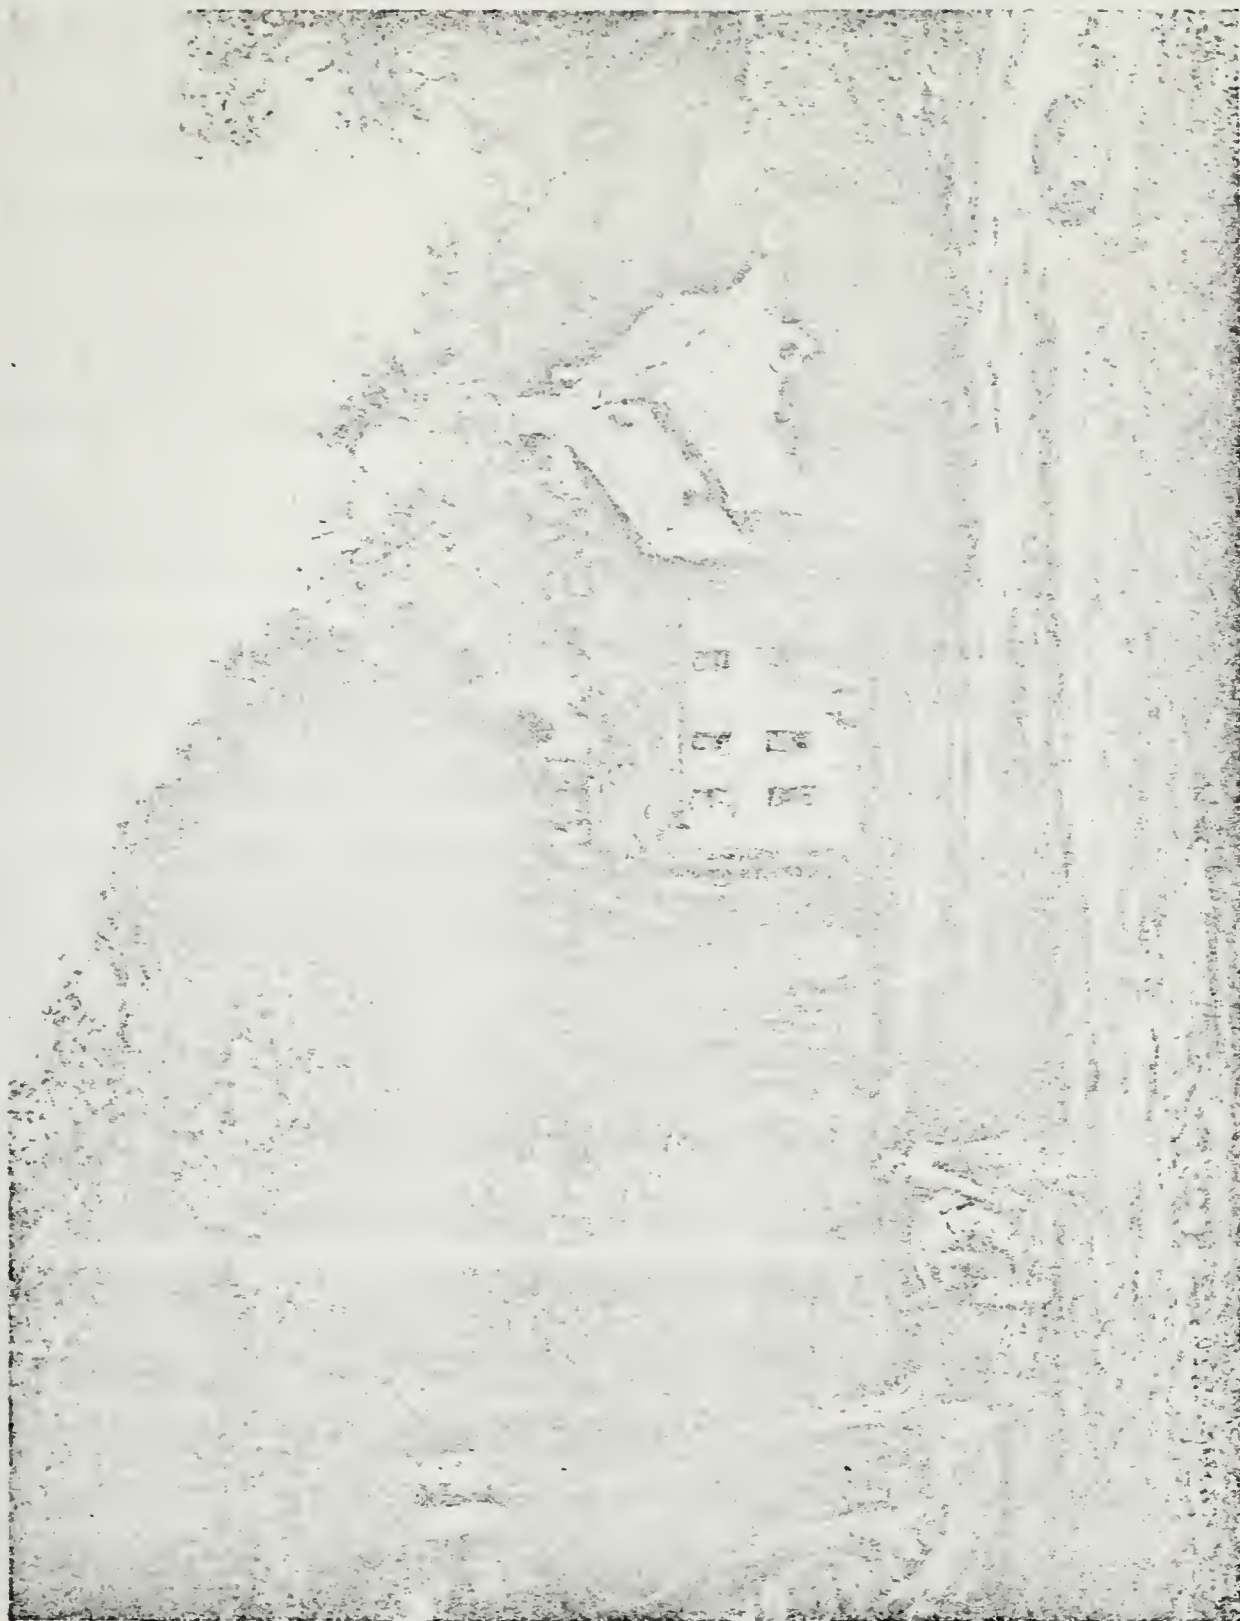

Another deed from same to same was dated 20th April 1678, and registered at Edinburgh 27th of said month. Patrick Angus inherited this property as only son and nearest heir to his father Robert—dated 1st October, 1690, and registered at Dumfries 2d of said month.

Disposition of said property from Patrick Angus to William Lennox, lawful son of William Lennox, burghess of Kirkcudbright and Margaret Whitehead (daughter of William Whitehead) his spouse in conjunct fee and life rent and their children in fee 26th July, 1690—Sasine dated 1st October, 1690, and registered at Dumfries 2d of same month. (William Lennox was living in Milnhouse in 1686.) An inventory of the title of Milnhouse, etc., in favor of William Lennox, son of William and Margaret Lennox, was executed by him to the Hon. Basil Hamilton, along with a Disposition of the said lands dated 3d May, 1727, and which remained in the hands of William Gordon of Campbelltown to be given upon receipt. In a different handwriting there is at the end of this Inventory "The Receipt by Andrew Aloes as Doer for the Hon. Dunbar Hamilton for these papers dated 15th July, 1743.

Dunbar Hamilton succeeded to the property on the death of his father Basil Hamilton in 1741 and became Earl of Selkirk on the death of his granduncle in 1744. He died in 1799 and was succeeded by his youngest son Thomas, Earl of Selkirk, grandfather of Capt. John Hope, R.N. of St. Mary's Isle, who supplied all the above information in 1898.

Although William Lennox executed a deed of Milnhouse to Basil Hamilton in 1727 and deposited it together with the inventory of title to be given on receipt, it was apparently never requested until 1743, after Basil Hamilton's death, and just prior to the death of his uncle the Earl of Selkirk. As James Lenox of New York said, the property was lost to the "then Earl of Selkirk," the deed may have been made in Basil Hamilton's name at the request of his uncle. Basil Hamilton died in 1741, without claiming the property and it was not until 1743 that his son Dunbar took possession, a few months before the death of his granduncle, the Earl of Selkirk, whom he succeeded. William Lennox may have been dead at this time. In March, 1739, he was still described as of Milnhouse, and he probably remained in possession of the property until his death.

NEW HAMBURGH, N. Y.

John Fisher Sheafe was the first of the family to buy at this place. He had previously bought land near Fishkill, with the intention of building, but had been advised by a friend to go up to New Hamburg and see the view from the ridge north of that place before doing so. "We were so captivated by the beauty of that scene," said Mrs. Sheafe, "that we decided at once to buy and build," and they called their home "High Cliff." This was in 1835. The property was on the west side of the road from New Hamburg to Poughkeepsie and this part of the road was sometimes known as the Sheafe road.

It was the Marquise De La Tour Du Pin who, in her sail from Albany to New York in 1795, after her flight with her husband from France, wrote of part of this view, "The river before entering the highlands forms a large basin over a mile wide (Newburgh Bay) similar to that part of the Lake of Geneva called Le Fond du Lac, with this difference that here the mountains rise from the edge of the water"—"the North or Hudson River is extremely beautiful"—"Perhaps it has lost some of its beauty, if they have cut down the fine trees which dipped their ancient branches in the waters of the river." Mrs. Sheafe lived to see a great change in her view, with its brick yard and quarry. Mr. Sheafe also bought land on the opposite side of the road, which was known as "Chestnut Hill" farm. In 1837 Mr. James Lenox bought the land he named "Netherwood." In 1838 Mr. Sheafe's mother, Mrs. James Sheafe, of Portsmouth, N. H., bought the property north of her son's and called it "The Cedars." At this time these properties included both sides of the road for some one and a half miles. In 1849, when the Hudson River R.R. built its first section to Poughkeepsie, cutting Mr. Lenox's property off from the river, he sold his place to Mr. Gardner G. Howland. In 1856 Mr. James Donaldson bought from Mr. Sheafe that part of the Chestnut Hill Farm which was on the east side of the road and named it "Homewood." On the death of Mrs. James Sheafe in 1863, "The Cedars" was left to her granddaughter, Louisa Sheafe Haven, wife of Mark Freeman, who sold it in 1869 to Dr. James Lenox Banks, who added the third story and tower to the house. This property was sold in 1926.

In 1868 Mr. Aaron B. Belknap purchased land on the same road from Mr. Sheafe and built his residence.

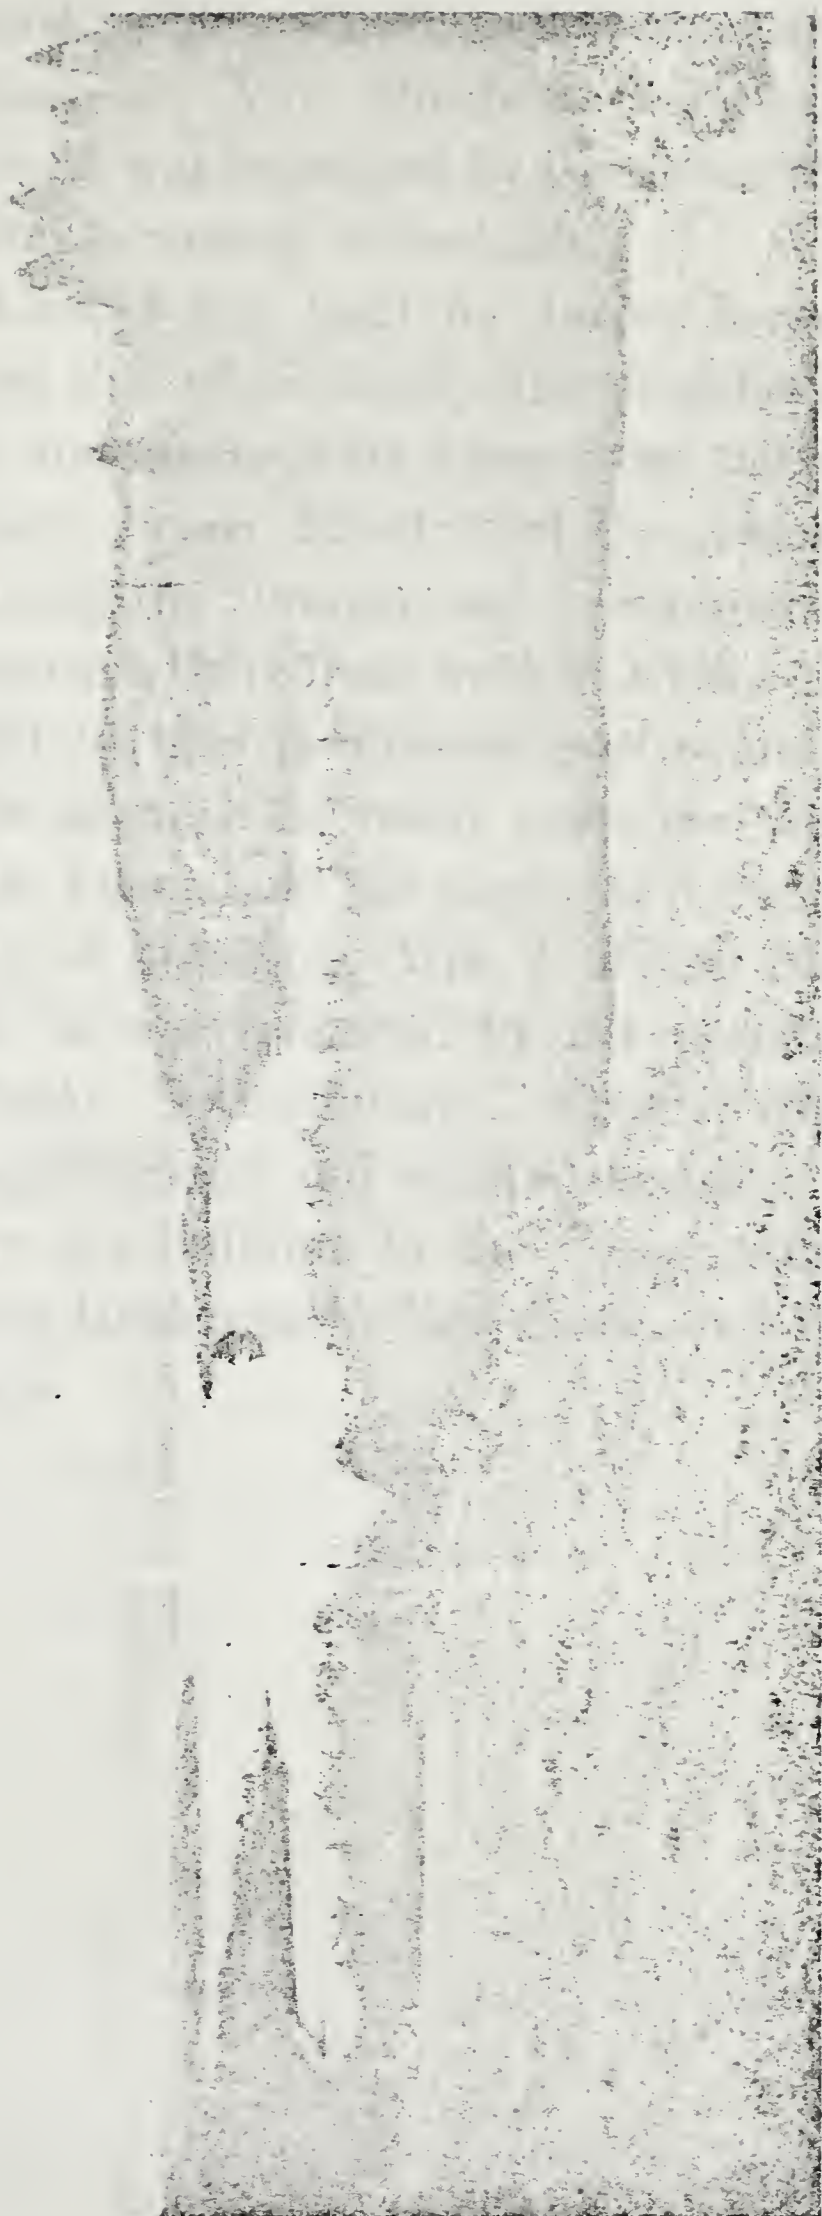

All these properties were farm lands when first bought and the houses were built and the grounds laid out by the respective owners. Sometime early in the 1840's Mr. Lenox and Mrs. Sheafe built a school house on the corner of the Sheafe and Channingville roads, where they supported a free day school for the benefit of the children of neighboring farmers. This school ran for several years until it was no longer needed. The building was then used on Sundays during the summer for a Sunday School and was known as the Ellesdie Sabbath School. The classes were personally conducted by Mrs. Sheafe and her neighbors and continued until near the time of her death in 1886. On the last Sunday of each season every scholar was given two books by Mrs. Sheafe as a Reward of Merit, and every book was examined by her or her friends to see it was a suitable Sunday School gift.

The Ellesdie Chapel was built by James Lenox for his convenience and that of his family and neighbors. It was a free church and received its name from the initial letters of the names—Lenox, Sheafe and Donaldson. It was open only during the summer, and Clergymen were invited at first to preach there from week to week. Later Revd. J. K. Wight became permanent pastor and held services during the summer for many years and until it closed. When Mr. Lenox sold his place the Chapel became the property of his sister, Mrs. J. Fisher Sheafe, and on her death, it was inherited by her grandniece, Mrs. Isabella Banks Satterthwaite. Finally due to changes in the neighborhood and small attendance, Mrs. Satterthwaite gave the building to the Congregation of the Church at New Hackensack, New York, and it was moved to that place.
